Perspective of the Seminar

It is conceived that the modern society is passing through an acute crisis in respect of moral values and ethics. It is the young generation who are the worst sufferers among others. The day to day focus on electronic and print media sometimes leads us to doubt the sanctity of our relationships. Even husband-wife, parent-children, brother-sister and teacher-student relationships are not above confusion. All fundamental social relationships are thought to be standing on the bank of ruin. With the rising consumerism, the quest for materialistic happiness as well as the growing apathy for time tested social order are taking us further away from the path of values. Respect for the elders, love for the friends and family and sympathy for the weak—all these positive values are on the decline today. Under this chaotic social order it is the sacred responsibility of the higher educational institute to contribute to the revival of value system and ethics in the society for the better future of the society, nation and the global humanity.
